GOVERNOR DINGLEY'S RETIREMENT.

In extending hearty welcomes to the new State Administration, we should not omit to say a word in recognition of the merits of that which has just surrendered its trusts. Governor Dingley retires after two terms of service, having voluntarily waived the compliment of a third nomination, on account of the increasing and pressing demands of his professional interests, as the publisher and conductor of a widely circulating and influential newspaper. His successive administrations have fallen upon quiet times, but he has succeeded in signalling them by the inauguration of several important measures of policy and by the general watchfulness and zeal with which the affairs of the State have been managed. Like all other officials ambitious of the speedy accomplishment of various specific improvements, he has incurred some criticism, but it has been directed to the expediency of methods rather than to the soundness of views, and the most important of his recommendations have been given a cordial support. Long experience in the affairs of the State has rendered him familiar with the relations of various interests, and he has been indefatigable in devoting himself to his public duties. His professional brethren will warmly welcome him back to the editorial ranks, in which he will be able to exert an influence as potent and beneficial as in the office of chief magistrate which he has just retired.

THEY WILL SHOW THEIR HANDS

[From The New York Press.]

During the last few years we have all been accustomed to hear the Democrats complain bitterly of Republicans, and yet it is plain to see that Republicans are by no means their worst enemies. Quite from the members of their own party that they have most to fear. Who is to keep them in order? Almost every day some obstinate Democrat or other upsets our meeting, and makes a terrible mess of it. Yesterday it was Mr. Cox, from Missouri, who proposed a resolution in the House setting forth—in substance—that contraction of the currency was pushing the country at a rate to be stopped. Mr. Cox gallantly came forward and tried to put an extinguisher on the Press article, but the mischief was already done—the proposition was recorded in the proceedings of the House. The true spirit which animates the Democratic party had been revealed. It is enough to drive the managers to despair. The stage is set, the apparatus is brought out, and the magician appears and makes his Fabian speech assuring the ladies and gentlemen present that there is "no deception." Suddenly a Confederate starts up, and insists on explaining how the trick is done. How is it possible to continue the deception under such distressing circumstances as these?

MR. BLAINE'S ANSWER 2011. The N. Y. Tribune, with a lingering remembrance of poor Mr. Greeley's signing of John D.'s bail bond, is inclined to pity that unfortunate administration that admits that "Mr. Blaine's Amnesty Bill is likely to command the general support of the nation."

The Herald's Washington special says of the measure:

The Amnesty bill will probably come up on Monday and will cause a lively debate. As Mr. Blaine intends to adhere to his amendment the Democrats will be likely to defeat the bill in order to embarrass him. Should it pass the House with the Blaine amendment, it will be defeated in the Senate by a two-thirds majority. Mr. Blaine's resolve to call for more from Mr. Hatch.

THOSE QUEER ECONOMISTS

[Cor. N. Y. Times.

When the President's annual Message was read in the House Mr. Randall had an order made to expunge it from the printed report of the House proceedings for the reason that it would be inserted in the report of the Senate proceedings. Mr. Randall knew that the practice has been not to insert the annual Message in the printed proceedings of both branches of Congress, and the motion was a transparent effort to impress the country with the belief that the strictest economy was to be practiced in every direction. In view of Mr. Randall's conduct in this instance, it is worthy of notice that the Record of yesterday contained thirty-three columns of matter, most of it rule and figure work, which is paid for at double the ordinary rates of composition, inserted on motion of Mr. O'Brien, Democrat, of Maryland. This matter is made up of speeches delivered to the negroes of the city at several times from numerous carpetbaggers of eccentric character who settled himself in the lap of the working men of this district. The cost of printing this paper will exceed that of printing the last seven annual Messages of the President put together, and yet Mr. Randall offered no objection to its extravagance.

DO-NOTHING DEMOCRACY

The leaders of the Democratic House do not seem to construe an entirely happy family. Some of them begin to perceive that the waste of time is not insignificant in the "reform" tendencies of the new regime, and a sharp squabble over this point is thus described in a letter to the New Yorker:

The proposition made by Mr. Randall on behalf of the Committee on Appropriations that the House adjourn till Monday, and fell down upon like a sewer prelude from Mr. Fernando Wood. Mr. Randall explained that the committee wanted till Monday to get one or two bills ready to report to the House. Mr. Wood said that there had been two weeks' session, and expressed a decided opinion that the committee ought to have bills something ready by this time. There was no such arrange ment ordered as a demand for time after the first week of the session in order to consider bills in committee. Mr. Hale took issue with Mr. Wood on that, at the same time that he had not only received important bills from the committee, but had passed the Naval bill and sent it to the Senate. Mr. Wood thought this emphasized the necessity for the House to go to work. Mr. Randall explained that the bills were being very carefully scrutinized this year with the view to reducing them without interfering with the operations of the Government, and implied they had a different basis, requiring unusual time. Mr. Hewitt agreed with the gentleman from New York. Mr. Morrison, the leader of the House, came to Mr. Randall's assistance, and the adjournment was voted—yeas, 111; nays, 72. Mr. Wood was right in saying this action was unprecedented. Never in the history of the House has a month been so utterly frittered away. The majority has not only not taken any action, but has proposed nothing. In this respect the Democrats deserved a more sweeping rebuke than the Athenians received from Demosthenes, when he charged them with lack of patriotism, in the long contest with Philip, because they proposed a great many important measures without intermixing upon any of them. The Democratic House does not even propose anything.

The Democrats are finding the work of putting down the extravagances easy, as they expected. Mr. Randall's first exploit in regard to the reduction of the expenditures, included a cutting down of the consular and diplomatic bill five hundred thousand dollars. The sub-committee, however, to which we gave the bill after having acted to cut down nearly all allowances in that section, has dearly repented to the full committee, and has only succeeded in effecting a reduction of thirty-seven thousand dollars. The Republicans in the last Congress overhauled the matter so thoroughly as to leave very little to reduce in this session.

The Boston Journal's special says: The Committee on Appropriations was in session all day. The formal assignment of the appropriation bills has not yet been made. Randall and the Democratic representatives are much disappointed at not being able to secure greater reductions of the estimates. They are disturbed by the fact that the appropriations of the last Congress were made with great economy, and that further reductions cannot be made without crippling important interests of the Government. They have, however, promised their Democratic constituents that there shall be a reduction of forty million dollars. They commenced to-day to secure this reduction by proposing to reduce the salaries of the Professors and the pay of the cadets at West Point. The Legislative Appropriation bill will be reported in accordance with the estimates of the Commissioner of Pensions.

The N. Y. Tribune gives the following extract from the private jottings of a quiet looker-on in Washington, who is something of an amateur in politics." It was written on the 6th:

"Another victory for Blaine to-day. Randall had an amnesty bill. Blaine gave notice of an amendment. Randall said he wouldn't let Blaine's amendment in. Blaine asked how he was going to get through his bill, which required two-thirds, without Republican votes. Randall still said he wouldn't promise to let Blaine in. Blaine said: 'Then you will only keep a great many people without amnesty; that's your business.' (General laughter at Randall's.) On the whole, the Democrats don't show well. To-day, on Randall's motion to adjourn to Monday, to let the Committees have time, Fernando Wood rose in a huff and said the Committees had been idle long enough, that they ought to have brought in business before this. There was an undertone of suggestion that if he had been, and so forth, and so forth, and so forth, it would have been different. Thereupon a brief squabble among the Democrats amid the grins of the Republicans, and the motion passed.

One of the late candidates for Adjutant General tells a good story of himself. He sent a letter to a member of the House who is a member of the Society of Friends, in which he set forth his deeds of valor and blood. The disciple of John Fox made no written reply, but returned a generous supply of peace tracts.

"We expect want for capital." (Men kind if he won't lend us a quarter till we sell our clothes)

"We often take the entire proposition of two entire mills at once." (Customers who have visited his store say that this must mean "Gilt Mill," but we can't locate anything of the kind.)

"We must manufacture all our own clothing," (or "Buy it where we can get it cheapest," see former Ad.)

"We make such immense quantities as a thing that we cannot dispose of it at wholesale." (And then Ah Sin "takes a hand" to Jew it off onto the retail trade.)

A Card from the Sleeve of Ah Sin.

"We sold 30 pc. cent to the manufacturing prices." (Quiet Advertisement.)

"We propose to sell without any profit from now till March 1st, 1876." (First proclamation.)
